EST. 1984

ESTABLISHED 1984

Oregon Wine Press — then named Oregon Wine Press Calendar — was launched in 1984 by Portland-area natives Richard Hopkins and Elaine Cohen. In 2006, the magazine was purchased by News-Register Publishing Co., a family-owned, fourth-generation publishing company located in McMinnville, Oregon. From its base in the lush Willamette Valley, OWP continues the long tradition of excellence established by its founders.

NEWSWORTHY

Butterfly Effect

OREGON WINERY HELPS SAVE NATIVE INSECT FROM EXTINCTION

BY PATTY MANKILA

Oregon's wineries lead in protecting natural habitats while promoting sustainable practices. Van Duzer Vineyards gained distinction when it created specialized habitat havens to attract the Fender's blue butterfly, helping save it from extinction.

Van Duzer's role in this story began in 2009. In 62-acre Van Duzer property, Van Duzer Vineyards and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service (USFWS) created a conservation reserve program, had allowed the land to return to nature, letting wild grasses and trees grow. The discovery of a few Fender's blue butterflies in this area encouraged USFWS and Wildlife to secure a $50 million restoration grant.

Van Duzer signed a voluntary good neighbor landowner agreement to assist in restoring the habitat. With this agreement, USFWS and Wildlife provided the budget needed to restore a nine-acre prairie habitat on Van Duzer's property. Invasive plants, such as blackberries, Scotch broom, and grasses, were removed, and a variety of herbaceous flowering plants were planted. These are wildflowers: goldenrod, gnatcatcher, kangaroo paw, horsetail, lupine, monkshood, poppy, and yarrow. The habitat also attracts the Fender's blue butterfly.

The restoration work also promoted growth of kincaid, spear and sickle-leaved lupine, where the butterfly lays its eggs.

The life cycle of the Fender's blue is brief, Somers said. "Sometimes in mid-May when the temperatures are consistently in the 70s, the butterfly, after flying around for about a month." During that time, they lay eggs on the leaves of the kincaid lupine. The larvae hatch and feed until early July, when they drop to the base of the plant, entering diapause or hibernation. The larvae emerge the following spring, transform into pupae and finally, butterflies. The cycle continues as they take flight and lay eggs.

Over the years, Somers and his crew have continued habitat restoration, hoping the butterfly would make an appearance. Finally, in 2013, their efforts were rewarded. Several USFWS and Wildlife staff were visiting Van Duzer's property manager, explained how the geography drew the interest of U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

One month later, participating in the USFWS Conservation Reserve Program, had allowed the land to have iridescent sky-blue wings and female rust-brown. "They also have two black lines on their wings," said Somers. "Distinguishing them from other butterflies."

The Fender's blue species was first documented in the 1930s. Biologist Ralph H. Henshaw named the butterfly after his friend, Kenneth Fender, an entomologist local to the Willamette Valley. After discovering five, two more Fender's blue butterflies were documented at Van Duzer the next year, four in 2016, followed by 16 in 2017. While biologists continue visiting the property each spring, the population has increased enough for entomologists, not individual, count.

Recently, the Fender's blue butterfly was reclassified as "threatened," and no longer considered endangered. "It is the first insect to be de-listed from the endangered list," said Angela Gagnon, founder and marketing consultant with Fresh Life Creative.

Along the way, Somers has introduced other landscaping practices to improve native habitat. "I found a landscape who brings his crew onto the property and sets up fencing to enable livestock grazing," said Somers. "Each summer a herd of 120-150 ewes visit Van Duzer for lush grazing. It reduces mowing and the use of

A Dream Come True

HOW TRAGEDY UNITED ONE FAMILY TO ACHIEVE A SHARED WINE GOAL

BY AAKANKSHA AGARWAL

"There hasn't been a single year where I haven't spent at least a month in Napa Valley," says Winemaker Delmas Robert, recalling childhood crushes and memories of harvest grape stomping. Delmas Robert was born there, growing up amid the rhythms of vineyard life, even when her family moved away from the vines. Her parents, dreamers with more ambition than money, settled briefly in a small cottage in Calistoga in the early 1980s. "They couldn't afford it,"

Delmas Robert says. "But it was on 10 acres of mostly scrubland, with a small glen vineyard and an ambitious goal of planting wine grapes." That dream had to wait. With two children and mounting financial pressures, the family moved frequently, chasing opportunity. Steve Robertson, Delmas Robert's father, worked a variety of jobs, from housing development to fitness equipment distribution, while her mother, Mary Robertson, was employed by wine importer Wilson Daniels. Despite obstacles, they stayed closely tied to wine country through relationships with winemakers and vineyard managers. Delmas Robert recalls vivid childhood moments. "We grew up with Molly and Cooper Kennard. Their dad, Ted, served as winemaker at Heritage Vineyards for nearly three decades before launching TOR Kennard Family Wines. He had a small vineyard, so we'd all help pick it before heading to Heritage to foot-stomp the grapes on the crush pad."

TESTIMONIALS

READERS

“I really enjoy the work that you guys do at the OWP. As you are certainly aware, it is nearly impossible to toe the line between consumer and industry audiences and to satisfy the needs of both in one publication. You and your staff absolutely nail it.

Bill Hooper, Paetra Wines

“I spent more than a decade in the Willamette Valley before returning to Baker City in 2016. I enjoy the connection to the rest of the Oregon Industry through The Wine Press that I no longer have here. It's great to see and hear the stories of others outside of my region and across the stat.

Travis Cook, Copper Belt Wines, Snake River Valley

“I was really delighted in your coverage in OWP of South Salem Sips. My wife and I visited Cória Cellars last summer after seeing them in a Cellar Selects choice. After so many years of loving northern Willamette Valley wineries, I was totally unaware of this region, and it's quite a shock to see such well-developed vineyards! Cória has a great facility, friendly folks, a killer view and terrific wine.”

Dave Stewart, Willamette Valley

“Your publication is very professionally presented. We always look forward to each issue. Being from Yamhill County, we feel a sense of pride in the quality of the coverage. Keep on!”

Jeff and Kathy Pearson, Carlton

“I wanted to thank you for the beautiful job you did with the 20 year anniversary article. I've received so many nice notes with congratulations. I loved reading what my colleagues said, too. Thank you very much for helping us, as an industry, celebrate and learn!

Jessica Mozeico, Et Fille Wines

ADVERTISERS

“We decided to make an advertising investment to reach the Oregon wineries and their customers. Our diligence resulted in selecting The Oregon Wine Press as our ad partner. They have been terrific to work with, from account management to creative and messaging. We are so happy with them and the results!

Charlie Burrows, Power Systems Plus

“We thank OWP for being the voice of our industry through collaborative, educational and entertaining content. The publication has helped us share our story with the people that matter the most to us. Thank you, OWP, for being such a great partner for our winery.

Christine Collier, Willamette Valley Vineyards

“I am interested in advertising in OWP because since the onset of my participation in the Oregon wine industry, I have considered them the most faithful, committed and informative publication in our state about our wine industry. In addition, they've always been creative in how to establish, keep and maintain industry participants, and wine aficionados interested in their monthly publications. I consider OWP a true partner to my winery and my winery's goals. I also consider OWP a true partner, and of great service to our most important audience, the wine drinkers.

Mauricio Collada Jr. MD, Cubanísimo Vineyards

“OWP has been a pivotal marketing partner to help us build our statewide online presence and business growth. Since advertising in OWP and reaching a highly relevant consumer audience, we've seen a 25% increase to our website traffic and average page views have improved by 30%.”

Stacy Heatherington, Oregon.com

“We appreciate OWP so much we asked to become a distributor! Our associates, along with our customers, look forward to each monthly issue and connecting with the winegrape community. An advertiser as well, we've been very pleased with the response from our ad campaigns. Thank you for continuing to produce a quality publication backed by great customer service.”

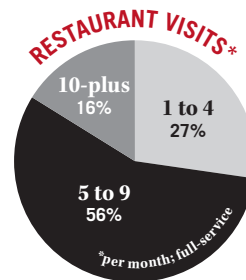

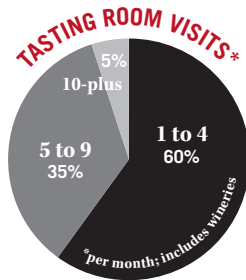

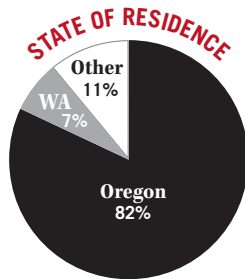

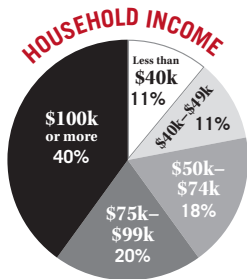

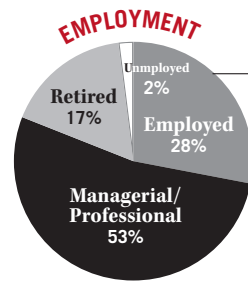

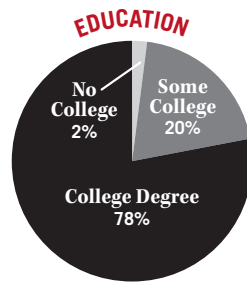

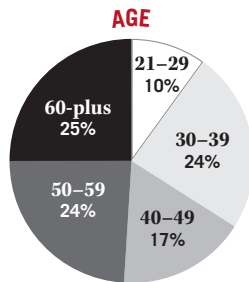

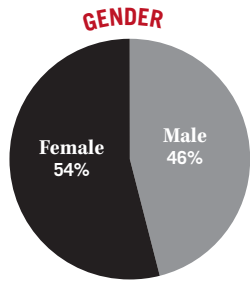

Lisa Gossett, Oregon Vineyard Supply

INDUSTRY LEADERS

“I just read the OWP review of “Voodoo Vintners.” Thank you so much! It means so much to me. I'm actually getting a little misty reading it — it is so beautifully written. I have already heard from one winemaker's wife who read the review and wants to buy the book. I think your review might be the single most important one for this book because it will reach everyone in the Oregon wine community who cares about this (admittedly obscure) issue. I can't thank you enough. Thank you, thank you, thank you!”

CELLAR SELECTS

CELLAR SELECTS

A Covey of Pinot Gris

THESE REFRESHING WINES ARE SURE TO DELIGHT

King Estate Winery 2024 Artisan Series Pinot Gris, Willamette Valley
Aromas reminiscent of walking along a stream filled with wet stones combine with honeycombs and floral notes of honeysuckle and orange blossoms. A generous entry presents flavors of mandarin oranges joined by pleasant minerality and honey notes from the nose. It is wonderfully balanced with a persistent mandarin orange peel conclusion. $20

Foris Vineyards 2022 Pinot Gris, Rogue Valley
Heady honeysuckle aromas unite with slate, tangerine and toasted hazelnuts. Bright and tart, this wine expertly weaves flavors of jasmine flowers with the tartness of lemon curd and citrus rind. Acidity skillfully walks a tightrope, contributing additional finesse and a lingering trail with ample almond notes. $17

Del Rio Vineyard Estate 2023 Pinot Gris, Rogue Valley
A summer bouquet in a glass! Floral aromas of jasmine, white lily, orange blossom and honeysuckle flowers join in joyful harmony. A round, full mouthfeel introduces flavors of lemon zest and hints of almond with honeysuckle on repeat. Racy, refreshing citrus notes add complexity to the bright, tart finish. $21

Reustle Prayer Rock Vineyards 2023 Estate Selection Pinot Gris, Umpqua Valley
This wine intrigues with a complex nose of honeydew melon, freshly baked bread and a summer rain shower. Enveloping the palate with a broad, luscious mouthfeel, it delivers a refreshing blend of flavors: white grapefruit, honey and lemon curd. Rich and creamy, the tenacious, honeyed finish continues to charm until the final drop. $29

St. Innocent Winery 2023 Pinot Gris, Mountai Vineyard, McMinnville
This copper-colored, skin-contact Pinot Gris supplies fruity aromas of strawberry, raspberry and claretines. Possessing layers and texture with flavors of caramel poaches, Cara Cara oranges and mandarin orange segments, this off-dry wine is both distinct and versatile. Culminating into a delicate, sweet strawberry ending, it becomes more memorable with each sip. $32
